EASIER HOME ENTRY NOW LEAGUE GOAL

BROADER SEARCH POWERS IS PROPOSED BILL'S AIM

Rumpus Started By Berger and Wheeler, the latter on the War Path and Wants Congress To Amend the Volstead Act to Tighten Further the Provision Respecting Search of Private Homes--Records In Mayflower Hotel Liquor Case Stolen Is Admitted.

The riot of words over prohibition continued unabated at Washington Sunday with new ramifications adding fury to the controversy and fresh incitements in prospect.

The Sunday development included disclosure that a file of government records in the Mayflower hotel liquor case had been stolen from prohibition headquarters, and an announcement by dry leaders that counter moves will be made against the new onslaught by the wets.

The dries are preparing to counter the wet "liberalizing" moves with efforts to amend the Volstead act to tighten search of private homes.

As a consequence of the drive loosed against prohibition by Representative James A. Gallivan in the House Sunday, and the recent liquor indictments in Indiana, Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, and Representative Victor L. Gerger, of Wisconsin, issued statements on the subject of enforcement.

Wheeler struck back at the Massachusetts member, who had denounced him the day before and Mr. Berger, who favors legalization of beer and wine, charged that the dries, by their efforts to enforce the Volstead act, were "creating a series of evils greater than the one they intended to remove."

The Anti-Saloon League counsel announced that a bill soon would be introduced to broaden the powers of agents in searching homes.

Under present provisions of the Volstead act, Wheeler said, it is impossible for enforcement officials to obtain a search warrant for entry of a private home unless they have evidence of sales, and the purpose of the new bill is to make any evidence of manufacture of distilled spirits reason for entry.

As to the government records which were stolen officials would say little. Roy A. Haynes, prohibition commissioner, admitted they had been stolen a few days prior to the trial here of Jules R. Venice, former chef at the Hotel Mayflower and Renard Blazi, waiter, both of whom were acquitted of conspiracy charges, a few days ago.

Wheeler, however, was acquainted with the disappearance of the records and, in his reply to Mr. Gallivan, inquired why it had not attracted the attention of the house member, whose speech was regarded to be one of the most vigorous attacks upon prohibition in some months.

Mr. Haynes declined to divulge any information he had on the case, and James E. Jones, prohibition director, was absent from the city. Mr. Wheeler, however, said suspicion had attached to one or two persons, but he declined to identify them.

Mr. Haynes said the records were supposed to be in their regular places in metal encased files until they were requested by attorneys preparing for the prosecution of Venice and Blazi. An investigation apparently has failed to solve the mystery, altho Elmer L. Irely, chief of the intelligence unit of the bureau of internal revenue, was not informed of the inquiry, he said, until questions relating to the case were made of him.

The records included reports of the work of Agents E. C. Brigfield and Cola M. Earfly, who planned the Mayflower Hotel trap which developed the charges against Venice and Blazi, with other confidential papers.

SEARCHING FOR MURDERER OF A CHINAMAN

Tentacles of the On Leong and Hip Sing Tongs stretched out for the murderer of Louie Low, the second Chinese slain in Cleveland since last September.

Louie Low's body, the throat slashed and the head crushed in, was found in his laundry Thursday night. He had been dead at least eighteen hours according to the coroner.

The Tongs promised to help police find the slayer, who is believed to have been Louie Low's business partner. Robbery was the motive, Tongmen said they believed. Louie Low was known to carry a large sum of money and this was missing.

The murder was discovered by a cousin of Louie Low.

Marvelous Memories

Some years ago a well-known pianist gave an exhibition of his marvelous powers of memory by playing without a pause 400 pieces of music without a page of notes before him, and another eclipsed even this feat by similarly playing 1,500 separate compositions during a continuous sitting of 40 hours.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From the Wires by Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

(United Press)

Steubenville--Several arrests may be made today in connection with the explosion which wrecked the tippie of the Gilchrist mine of the Pittsburgh Coal company in Brooke county, West Virginia, near here Sunday, Sheriff Charles E. Lowe declared.

Cleveland--The explosion of a still in a garage here yesterday resulting in an unidentified man being burned to death may end in the breaking up of a liquor ring, according to detectives. Articles found in the debris of the building, a garage which had been rented to a man giving the name of Morris Gross including the license plate on a burned truck, were being traced today in an effort to find the owner.

Columbus--G. C. Roley, 35, was killed here this afternoon when a small shack, being transported from the Carnegie Steel plant, toppled off a truck, pinning Roley beneath it.

Frank C. Lehner, 67, was injured but will recover.

Springfield--Six more paving suits were filed today on behalf of the city commissioners and naming F. M. and Ed Ryan, contractors. The city is seeking to recover $66,000 for alleged "skimping" in the use of materials for paving the streets. Two similar suits were filed recently.

Canfield--Fire, which for a time, threatened to wipe out a part of this village, was brought under control today after doing damage estimated at several thousand dollars. Sparks from a defective chimney ignited the roof of a lumber company and only the quick response of volunteer fire fighters, prevented the blaze from spreading.

Among the rare animals which are in danger of extinction is the gorilla, though between 100 and 200 still remain in the Belgian big game sanctuary in the Congo.

BADLY INJURED BY FALLING OFF STEP OF TRUCK

Superintendent A. F. Cameron Met With Painful Accident Friday Evening.

A. F. Cameron, superintendent of the Pickaway township schools, was severely injured Friday evening about 10 o'clock when he fell off the step of a school truck, which was returning with a load of basketball players, who had played a game at Tarlton.

Edward Dumm was in charge of the truck, and he was driving fast when the accident befell Professor Cameron. The latter had expressed a desire to make the northbound traction car which was due at Miller station. Mr. Cameron either jumped or fell off the step in front of the Dessell Kiger residence. He fell on his face and both of his eyes were injured and he was also considerably injured about the body.

When picked up by Mr. Dumm, Mr. Cameron was unconscious. Mr. Dumm assisted by the basketball players, carried the injured man into the home of Mr. Kiger and Dr. Jackson was called. He recovered consciousness and was removed to his home in this city Saturday.

His condition is considerably improved and it is thought that in a few days he will be able to resume his duties.

Old "Washington Elm" Is Saved by Operation

Newark, N. J.--The old Washington elm tree at Ho-Ho-Kus is resting comfortably after an operation on its trunk, and, the tree surgeons predict, is good for at least twenty or twenty-five years more.

The tree, which was long past the sapling stage when Washington marched his troops under its boughs from Fort Lee to the revolutionary post at Ramapough, was suffering from an old wound, and it was said the operation was performed just in time. The wound was made when road builders cut away a portion of its roots to make room for a concrete base, and was never properly treated.

First one branch and then another fell away. Then the trunk became scaly, and it was feared the old tree was done for. Tree surgeons were called into consultation, and the operation was decided on. The dead parts were cut away and the exposed parts covered with a tar substance. Holes were filled with concrete and painted over.

PNEUMONIA

Caused Death of William H. Foresman--Funeral Services Tuesday Afternoon.

William H. Foresman died at his home, 147 Pleasant street, Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. His death was due to pneumonia, following a week's illness.

The deceased was born in this city, May 2, 1854, and was a son of William Keith Foresman and Mary McFeeters Foresman. He was a carriage trimmer by trade, but for the past few years had been employed by the Haswell Range and Furnace company.

Mr. Foresman married Miss Belle Thompson, who survives. He was a member of the United Brethren church.

Of his immediate family four cousins are living. They are Misses Blanche and Mary K. McCrady and Officer William McCrady, of this city and Bennett F. Ludwig, of Texas.

The funeral services will be held at his late home Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Sidney W. Hiles will officiate. Interment will be in Forest cemetery. The pallbearers will be L. M. Binkley, J. C. Haswell, William McCrady, Alex Coon, E. S. Neuding and William Lake.

MAYOR'S COURT

George Speakman was placed under arrest Saturday evening by Officer McCrady, charged with attempting to pass a spurious check. It was drawn for $6.50 and was made payable to George Speakman and was signed with the name of "Chas. H. Raney," the check was also endorsed with the names of Peter Justice and Speakman. All signatures with the exception of the payee were forged. Speakman had a hearing before Mayor Fitzpatrick, waived examination and was bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $500, which being unable to furnish, he was remanded.

MRS. S. D. FESS DEAD AS RESULT OF AN ACCIDENT

Wife of U. S. Senator Was a Native of Rushville--Funeral at Yellow Springs.

Mrs. Simeon D. Fess, wife of the senator from Ohio, died Sunday at Washington.

Mrs. Fess died at Emergency hospital late Sunday of complications resulting from injuries received in an automobile accident on Summit Mountain, near Uniontown, Pennsylvania, November 24, while the senator and his party were returning to Washington for the opening of congress.

The funeral party left Washington Sunday evening by train for Yellow Springs where services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mrs. Fess, who was president of the Congressional club, is survived by her husband; three sons, Hamilton, Lehr, parliamentarian of the house of representatives; Lowell, of Columbus, secretary of the Ohio Retail Merchants' association and C. Summer, of Greenfield, Ohio; a sister, Mrs. Minnie Bazore and a brother, Edward Thomas both of Columbus.

Eva C. Thomas Fess was born at Rushville, Ohio, in 1865, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Thomas. She attended public schools and graduated from Ohio Northern university at Ada, Ohio, where she later taught.

While a student there she met Mr. Fess, then head of the American history department and they married in 1890, a year after her graduation. Later they went to the University of Chicago, where Mr. Fess taught.

When he became president of Antioch college at Yellow Springs, Ohio, in 1907, Mr. and Mrs. Fess made that place their home and had lived there ever since.

Mrs. Fess was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Yellow Springs. She was greatly interested in religious activities and belonged to several religious bodies, including the Women's Missionary society of the church. She was also a member of the Yellow Springs Literary association and the Xenia Junior Women's club.

Mrs. Fess has written numerous articles for the Yellow Springs News. Besides these, she has written several articles which have been published in magazines of national circulation. She received her education at Ohio Northern university, Ada, where she was graduated with honors in a literary course in 1889.

This home is located near Lebanon and was formerly the Shaker Home. It comprises 4005 acres and was given to the United Brethren church by Charles Persinger, of Washington C. 419 East Union street, Thursday, December 17, 1925, a daughter, Ruth during the lifetime of the donor.

Finding Ambergris

Tramping over Nantucket with his dog, Edward Davis skirted the shore. Wedged between two rocks, washed now and then by the waves, was a sticky, waxy mass. Mr. Davis did not pay much attention to it, but the hunting dog knew his business and persisted in calling his attention to it. Mr. Davis scraped the substance together and took it home. He later brought it to New Bedford and submitted it to Capt. Benjamin D. Cleveland, a retired whaling master, who pronounced it ambergris. If so, the hunting trip nets Mr. Davis $1,792.—New York World.

A Stage Romance

"A H! YOU are superb!" said Madame Olga, who was waiting in the wings of the Universal Vaudeville theater to go on for her turn as Adolphus Maxim came off to thunderous applause.

Madame Olga never had seen or heard Adolphus Maxim before, but artistic fellowship had led her to speak and enthusiasm had colored her greeting.

Adolphus Maxim was a virtuoso—a trombone virtuoso—and his hair, flowing in leonine luxury, had amazed Madame Olga no less than his playing of the trombone had done. His trombone playing was really extraordinary. He could syncopate such classics as Schubert's "Hark, Hark, the Lark!" but was inimitable with such ragtime ditties of the day as "When Father's Whiskers Got Afire." This particular ditty was usually sung to the pattering of fire horses' hoofs, bell ringing and whistle blowing off stage—a sort of fire department obligato. By his wonderful art on the trombone Adolphus Maxim could win more applause for "When Father's Whiskers Got Afire" than all this "business," supplemented by the very best ragtime vocalism, could evoke.

Adolphus was flattered by Madame Olga's compliment and wrung her extended hand as she went on. He stood in the wings to watch her act and became enthusiastic as he saw her beautifully ampie figure swing and sway in the lifting and juggling of heavy weights. She was a strong woman in the winter in the vaudeville, and a lion tamer in the summer in the circus.

"Magnificent" Adolphus exclaimed, as she came off also to great applause. A romance had begun. Day after day, night after night, they greeted and applauded each other and grew fonder. Before the week's engagement had ended, Adolphus had proposed marriage and been accepted. Friday forenoon they went together for a marriage license. On the street, everywhere, as in the theater, Adolphus' hair excited wonder and admiration.

The stage is a field of real as well as fictional romance, and this aside from ventures of Johnnies at stage doors and elsewhere and episodes following the perfumed billets-doux of matinee idols.

Here and there is an actor who is almost steadily in the newspapers because of his matrimonial variety. Marital enterprise and the pursuit of art with him go hand in hand. And here and there is an actress of like dual demonstration. Neither of these, of course, changes partners seriously with every change of part, and thus the psychologist cannot lay this amatory inclination to the influence of dramatic authors, although the acting of ever-changing love scenes may have some impulsive effect. If some of those in higher stage walks may marry often, why should not those in the lower walks marry once in a while?

Sunday morning, with four fellow artists, Adolphus and Madame Olga visited a clergyman and were married. The party repaired to Madame Olga's hotel, where her quarters had been extended to a suite, for a wedding feast. After prolonged gaiety their friends left them, and the happy couple retired to their individual rooms to dress for their first evening alone.

As Adolphus changed his formal attire for something more comfortable, he heard Madame Olga's voice in extravagant endearment.

"Oh, my darling!" she cried, "how I love you! How I love you!" "Ah," thought Adolphus, "what a fine woman! And how she loves me!" Joyous, he quietly entered her room.

She stood with her back to the door, fondling a chetah cub, which purred responsive affection.

Adolphus swelled with rage and jealousy. "So, madam!" he cried, "that creature is the object of your affection eh?"

As she turned in surprise, she saw Adolphus, but not her Adolphus. His sparse hair was plastered to his head in sections between which were strips of unmitigated baldness that shocked. "Your hair—where is it?" she cried. "My hair? Did you think, then, madam," he sneered, "that you were marrying a wig?"

Madame Olga laughed in a way that made Adolphus shudder. She pointed to the door.

"Go!" she said. "I never want to see your face again!"

And as Madame Olga was a strong woman and had tamed lions, Adolphus went.

ABSTRACT OF THE TAXES FOR PICKAWAY COUNTY

County Treasurer M. B. Trout Is Charged With $950,405.53, Which Is Larger Than Last Year—Circleville City Will Receive $55,488.19, And Our Schools $91,227.49—County Schools And Municipalities Will Get Less Than a Year Ago.

County Auditor Bryce Briggs completed his abstract of taxes a few days ago for 1925, to be certified to the Auditor of State and the State Tax Commission. The abstract shows County Treasurer M. B. Trout charged with $950,405.33 to be collected this December and next June collections.

This amount is $3,138.61 in excess of the total amount charged last year, the total tax value of the County has increased from $55,569,780 last year to $55,754,500 for this year.

The increase is represented in delinquent taxes carried over from last year, and special assessments for Circleville.

	1925	Increase	Decrease
State	$ 13,938.59	$	$ 509.45

Grand Total ...$950,405.33 $ 18,404.40 $15,265.79

Of the above amount Circleville City will receive $55,488.19 for municipal purposes as compared with $56,166.20 last year and Circleville schools will receive $91,227.49 as compared to $90,610.63 received last year.

OIL OUTLOOK REASSURING

Commenting on our future supply of oil, the Standard Oil Bulletin, published by the Standard Oil Company of California, says:

"Predictions of failure of the American supply of oil have been made almost from the beginning of the oil industry. All have proved fallacious. When the production of old fields has dropped off, the oil industry has found new fields."

A committee of eleven members of the Board of Directors of the American Petroleum Institute has just issued a report on the future of the industry. The report draws particular attention to two impending developments of very great importance. One is the extension within the industry of "cracking" crude oil, a process which increases the yield of the all-important gasoline. The other is a change in motor construction which, roughly speaking, will double the mileage of the automobile per gallon of gasoline. Herein is true conservation.

Altogether, the findings of the committee are reassuring. There may be passing periods of shortage of petroleum but there is no danger in the situation.

Japan's Gentle Way

In Japan, when a police officer takes a man into custody, he ties a bit of string around the arrested man's wrist and then leads him by the loose end of the frail fetter to the police station. So strong is the Japanese respect for the law that the piece of string holds the prisoner as securely as though he were manacled by steel.

PUBLIC UTILITIES RULINGS

Columbus, Dec. 18.—(UP.)—The public utilities commission has authorized the Cadiz Bus Line company, operating between Cadiz and Steubenville, to sell its certificate to E. O. Jennings for $50,000.

The commission restricted the authority of the Buckeye Special Transit company to operate busses over irregular routes in Ohio in a ruling interpreting the privileges of their certificate.

The commission held that the company cannot operate busses between points that are on the regular routes of any established transportation company.

The commission's ruling followed a request of C. J. Randall, secretary of the Ohio Motor Bus Owners' Association, for an interpretation of the company's certificate.

And Still Be Alive.

Seventeen years ago, Frederick Hoelzel, a Chicago boy, denied an opportunity to go to college because of ill health due to stomach trouble, began to experiment with his inner mechanism. The result is outlined in an article in this week's Liberty by William F. Forman.

Hoelzel started, by fasting a week, to put on weight. He succeeded, and it started him on a line of dietetic experiments that have made him a veritable walking laboratory for the University of Chicago, Forman recounts.

"Twice within the last four months," the author recounts, "Hoelzel has set new world's records for fasting. Having gone for thirty-three days and seventeen hours without food, Hoelzel ate a few meals and then started on another fast that lasted for forty-one days and seventeen hours, a total of one thousand, eight hundred and ten hours without food within a period of four months."

And now, in Liberty, he tells the women folks how to take off superfluous flesh.

And they don't have to starve themselves to do it, either!

OHIO DRUGGISTS MAY SEEK OWNERSHIP LAW

Columbus, Dec. 19.—Ohio druggists may ask the legislature at its next session to pass a law limiting drug store ownership to registered pharmacists. According to the Ohio State Pharmaceutical Association, a certain undesirable class is now invading the ranks of the druggists, which is interested only in the financial returns and not in pharmacy as a profession or in the service that can be rendered the public. As one step in the movement to remedy this condition, bonafide drug stores over the state are being supplied with signs bearing the word "Registered Pharmacist."

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Taming Speed Maniacs

Authorities in Bulgaria sometimes adopt crude methods to enforce the speed limit. During the months when, because the roads are not macadamized, there is a great deal of dust, soldiers and policemen are stationed on roads leading into Sofia. When a car is adjudged to be going too fast an admonition is shouted. If the speed is not slackened immediately a rifle shot is fired into the air. If that does not produce the desired effect aim is directed at the wheels. It may be imagined that unless the rifle is in the hands of an expert marksman the occupants of the car are likely to be hit. But the treatment stops the cars.

QUEEN ESTHER SOCIETY SAW SANTA CLAUS

Last Thursday the Queen Esthers of the Methodist Episcopal church met at the home of Miss Dorothy Denman. Presents were distributed by Santa Claus from the grab-bag.

The meeting was called to order by singing Christmas carols. A business meeting then followed and orders were taken for Queen Esther pins. A new president, Aubrey Wickensimer and a new vice president, Beatrice Hosler were elected to fill vacancies that will be left by Miss Esther and Edma Shasteen on their leaving Circleville. A program then followed consisting of a violin solo by Beatrice Hosler accompanied by Aubrey Wickensimer, a piano solo by Miss Constance Himrod and a piano duet by Misses Aubrey Wickensimer and Kathryn Morris. Misses Ruth Crable, Louise Martin, Lucile Hegele, Martha Bartley, Mary Rency and Mrs. Charles Reichelderfer, Laura Leist and Waldon Reichelderfer were enrolled as new members.

The meeting was closed by singing "Holy Night." Refreshments were served by the committee for the month. All departed saying they had a fine time.

FOUR PEDESTRIANS KNOCKED OUT

Columbus, Dec. 19.—Professor Charles Sumner Plumb, 66, chairman of the department of animal husbandry at Ohio State University, was injured so badly he is not expected to recover; Mrs. M. Sheridan suffered a fractured leg and internal injuries, and her daughter, Mary Sheridan, suffered several broken ribs last night when a hit-skip motorist knocked them to the street at State and Third streets.

Professor Plumb was widely known. He is a native of Westfield, Mass. He received his bachelor of science degree at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst.

British Honored Sons of Benedict Arnold

Very little has been written of Arnold outside of his traitorous conduct in connection with the attempted surrender of West Point to the British, says the Dearborn Independent. Through a correspondence with Major Andre, Arnold, then commanding West Point, offered to surrender to the British; and to consummate the plan Arnold and Andre met at midnight on the shore of the Hudson September 21, 1780. The capture of Andre frustrated the scheme, and Arnold fled to the British sloop of war Vulture.

The British made him brigadier general and he fought the American army at Richmond, Portsmouth and New London, Conn. In December, 1781, he sailed for England with his family, who were pensioned by the British government. He received about $31,755 for his alleged losses in deserting the Americans. Failing to get a position in the army he was forced to take up the trade of merchant. He carried on trade with the West Indies, but returned to London in 1791.

War between France and England exposed his shipping to great risks and Arnold on one occasion was captured by a French ship, but managed to escape. The British government still refused to give him active service in the army and he turned his attention to fitting out privateers against France to recover his lost fortune, but being unsuccessful, weighed down by private debts, and despised by America and the British empire, he sank into a state of acute melancholy, and died June 14, 1801, regretting, it is said, his treason.

His first wife gave birth to three sons. His eldest sons received commissions in the British army; and his second son by his second marriage, inheriting his father's daring and military ability, rose to be a lieutenant general, was made aid de camp to King William IV and was created a knight. Arnold's other children held honorable positions, and one of his grandsons, Capt. William Traill Arnold, a brave fighting man, was killed in the Crimean war.

Common Thing Now to Advertise for Mates

It is customary in France and Germany—and particularly Germany—to advertise for a husband or a wife, as the case may be. Judging from the newspapers, indeed, it would seem as though the respective countries were full of well-endowed men and women who, for some reason, have failed to find the right person with whom to share their lives.

It is rather new to see the same procedure in England in the guise of well-advertised newspapers devoted almost entirely to the promotion of marriage. In England the romantic view of marriage has held, at least in theory, and King Cophetua and the beggar maid have everywhere received approval, tacit or other.

There is the greater difficulty of marrying today owing to the discrepancies in the number of men and of women. It is probably a feeling that many women are practically unable to marry today which has caused greater concentration on the subject of marriage to the extent of making it almost a public matter.

Quite apart from the natural desire to marry, the life of the single Englishwoman is often intolerably lonely.
She has her work, but she has little besides. And work for work's sake is a dull business. A single man, besides being better paid, has community interests, which are as a rule not shared by women. He has his club, his games, even his favorite bar.

He has strength left over at the end of the day to be vigorous concerning politics or some other hobby. The woman has a narrower sphere, and she has not as a rule the necessary money with which to enlarge it. Matrimony provides some refuge from loneliness—a loneliness from which in the rather sad world of today, the average woman is thankful to escape.—Manchester Guardian.

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

A series of articles by prominent leaders on the Golden Rule as a guide in International Relations.

A SIGHT I SHALL NEVER FORGET

By DR. FRIDJOF NANSEN
Famous Explorer and Humanitarian

A few weeks ago I had a wonderful week with the happy children rescued by the Near East Relief in Armenia. I count those days among the most wonderful of my life.

I have cooperated with the Near East Relief in the past. But never before have I had the privilege of seeing its work so intimately. It has been a great revelation to me. I had never imagined that an American undertaking of such magnitude existed in the Near East.

I have seen the largest gathering of orphaned children in the world. In one spot, the Americans are bringing to independent self-support 11,000 homeless boys and girls. It was a sight I shall never forget. Many were children of kindergarten age, some so small they had to be carried.

The efficiency of the work in the orphanage schools and hospitals was particularly striking, as was the high standard of the American men and women training these children.

As I moved from one building to another, I thought I had never seen in all my life so many children so busy. Everyone was doing something. All were engaged in some sort of useful work. I saw great rooms full of girls making over old clothes sent by the generous people of America, and I stopped to watch other girls bent over intricate embroideries.

One of the delights of my visit was to sit down with the children and partake of the orphan meal of soup and bread, which is again this year to be the meagre fare of thousands of Americans on Golden Rule Sunday, in order to provide food for the orphans. It gave me a real appreciation of the sacrifice so many people in America make each year, and now that I know what it means to these children I intend to join in the observance of the day, an idea that should be a principle of international affairs.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work.

Still Work for Civilizers

It is estimated that there are 1,800,000 human beings in the world. Of this number two-thirds are only semi-civilized or in a barbaric condition.

Seems Logical

Blinks—"I don't see why you don't call them hay widows?" Jinks—"Why that?" Blinks—"Because grass is green and grass widows are anything but."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

MEN'S LIFE SPAN
PUZZLES SCIENCE

Do Married Men or Bachelors Live Longest Not Answered.

New York.—Which lives longer—the married man or the bachelor? Few other questions in vital statistics have been more widely discussed, says the New York Times. All information bearing on the subject has been studied by physicians, scientists, theologists, social welfare experts and criminologists, and with particular attention by the insurance companies.

The answer to this ancient question has a general and far reaching influence. If it is established that the chances of long life are greater for bachelors than for the married, both men and women will naturally be influenced in choosing between the two states. The moralist finds such statistics the basis for argument. For the insurance companies the question is a very practical one. Before millions of dollars are risked upon the expectation of life, the most reliable figures obtainable are gathered, regardless of trouble or expense.

Despite painstaking investigation, the problem today is still unsolved.

Hard Words for Bachelorhood.

One of the most distinguished advocates of the good influence of marriage on longevity, Dr. James Stark, registrar general of Scotland, said, after careful investigation, that "bachelorhood is more destructive to long life than the most unwholesome of trades." An array of figures has been quoted to prove this extreme view.

According to Doctor Stark's figures out of every 100,000 married men between the ages of forty and fifty, 1,407 die each year, as compared with 1,835 unmarried men who die among a similar number in the same period. In the early ages from twenty-five to thirty-five years, the proportion of deaths among the unmarried men is even greater. Out of 100,000 married persons, including widowers, from twenty to twenty-five years old, 620 die every year, while in the same number of unmarried persons between the same ages no fewer than 1,231 die annually.

According to other British statistics, the average number of deaths per year among unmarried men between the ages of twenty-nine and forty-six years is twenty-eight in every 1,000, while among married men in the same period the deaths are only 18.

A famous table prepared by Doctor Stark shows the contrast between the mortality of the married and the single is greatest between the ages of twenty and twenty-five, and varies considerably at subsequent ages. His summary of the yearly mortality per 100,000 is as follows:

Ages.	Married.	Single.
20-25	6.26	12.31
25-30	8.22	14.94
30-35	8.65	15.94
35-40	11.67	16.82
40-45	14.07	18.55
45-50	17.94	21.18
50-55	19.54	26.34
55-60	26.14	28.54
60-65	35.63	44.54
65-70	52.91	69.21

Some significant figures along this line have been collected by Bertillon, who formulated the familiar system of finger-print identification of criminals. The investigations of the statisticians of many insurance companies point to similar conclusions.

Old Ones All Married.

The greater longevity of married men over bachelors is also pointed out by Christopher von Ruffeland in his work, "The Art of Prolonging Life." This authority goes so far as to say that "there is not one instance of a bachelor's having attained to a great age." He also asserts, as a result of his investigations, that "all those people who have become very old were married more than once." This condition, he says, applies to both men and women. Similar claims for the influence of married life upon longevity might be quoted indefinitely.

Some of the best minds of the age have studied the problem. The statistics above quoted have been attacked by no less an authority than Herbert Spencer. The great philosopher accepted the statistics gathered by the Scotch statistician and others, but disagreed entirely with the conclusion that marriage itself prolongs life. The experts of modern insurance companies, it is found, seem to agree with Spencer's reasoning.

The great mass of statistics on the subject indicates in the main that married men as a rule actually live longer than bachelors, and that the advantage, measured in years, is often considerable. The best information obtainable is that such is true in both America and Europe.

The latest figures on the subject are probably those gathered by Frederick L. Hoffman, consulting statistician of the Prudential Insurance company of Newark. He has found that the death rate among single men in America is appreciably higher than among married men.

MOST ANXIOUS
MOMENTS

In Woman's Life Told By One Who'd Had Them.

What are the most anxious moments in a woman's life? Sophie Kerr, being a noted expert member of that sex, endeavors to tell in Liberty just what moments are the most anxious to the gentler beings.

"Please remember," she writes, "that we are considering the most anxious—not the most tragic, the most painful, or the most unhappy, and that anxiety is rather an agitation of the brain than of the heart."

"It has been suggested that a woman's most anxious moment is when she finds her first gray hair. Imagine that! Why, women of the present time don't care whether they have gray hair or not. There isn't any more age, there aren't any more old ladies knitting by the fireside and feeling neglected and forlorn."

"Beyond popularity, there's the question of marriage. I think the most anxious moment of the business woman is when she applies for her first job. To my mind the most anxious moment that any woman can feel is that of the mother whose children are acting and thinking wholly for themselves, who can no longer influence them, who is out of touch with their interests, and whom they regard as out-moded, out-of-date."

"It is a part of motherhood. But it is, and always will be, the most anxious moment in a woman's life."

Live Stock Needed for Right Farming

Soil Fertility Is Not the Only Big Problem.

Live stock and permanent agriculture have long gone hand in hand. It is a principle as old as agriculture itself that the land needs live stock as truly as live stock needs the land. Neither would one long continue to return a profit without the other. As a rule, the more live stock a farm maintains, the higher the state of fertility.

It is not advisable, however, to overdo the thing. The soil fertility problem is not the only problem the farmer has to face. There is the question of economics always awaiting him. These late years, especially, must he ask himself, "Does it pay?"

It is quite possible to carry the live-stock idea too far, to become overstocked and, because of sanitation, housing facilities, market conditions, etc., to waste one's profits through over-production. Professor Warren of Cornell university, who has given a lifelong study to the problems of farm management, says it is safer and usually pays better for the average farmer to keep no more stock than he has feed for, it being advisable in most cases to have a little feed to sell rather than to have to buy it.

To be a successful farmer, one must make a comfortable living from the land and leave it more productive than he found it. No method has so far been discovered that can bring about this result so simply and so satisfactorily as a well-balanced system of live stock farming, and the satisfaction and profits derived therefrom will depend in no small degree upon the quality of the live stock.

Animal Diseases Cause Great Losses to Farmer

"Diseases cause the greatest losses in animal husbandry," said Dr. V. A. Moore in a talk at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. "For that reason their control is of much importance."

Doctor Moore divides the diseases that affect domesticated animals into three groups, epizootic, infectious and sporadic. "The epizootic diseases, such as pleuro-pneumonia and foot-and-mouth disease, are better known to the public than are the others at the present time, but the losses from them are smaller than those from other diseases. The epizootic diseases are usually acute, highly infectious, and spread very rapidly."

"The infectious diseases which often take on epizootic form are hog cholera, anthrax, Texas fever, rabies, and several poultry diseases. The present knowledge of the nature of these maladies enables live stock sanitary officials and veterinarians to keep them under control. Infectious abortion in cattle and tuberculosis are very destructive and their prevention would save millions annually."

"The sporadic diseases cause the heaviest losses to live stock owners. They are caused by improper care, improper food, mechanical injuries, poisons, general infections, and parasitisms. Care and prompt attention by competent veterinarians will minimize them. In the prevention of sporadic and infectious diseases the owner has much responsibility."

Oats Fed Advantageously to Breeding Swine Herd

Oats have an important place in the making of hog rations, according to W. E. Carroll, chief of swine husbandry, University of Illinois. When oats are cheap in price compared to corn, they can be fed advantageously to the breeding herd. Oats are too bulky to make a good fattening food.

Pigs that are being grown out for the breeding herd as well as mature breeding sows and boars can be fed largely on oats when they are being pastured on good legume pastures.

Oats give better results when they are ground. This is particularly true for feeding young pigs and for sows just prior to farrowing time. When a sow is milking heavy not more than half the ration should be made of oats. Oats can be used for about one-third of the ration for fattening hogs when they are available.

FARM NOTES

It's weather—not wear—that destroys machinery.

Big yields are evidence that the producer has used thought, skill, and patience.

Farm animals must have salt. It whets the appetite and aids in preventing digestive disturbances.

Seeding of wheat should be postponed until the safe date in sections where Hessian fly infestation is common.

Potatoes, whether for seed or eating purposes, should be stored at temperatures of not more than 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

Types of farming vary in profitability to about the same extent that they utilize the operator's time the year around.

Avoid filling the chicken house with chickens beyond its capacity. Each bird ought to have at least eight inches of space on the roost.

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

A series of articles by prominent leaders on the Golden Rule as a guide in International Relations.

FARMERS IN OLD STYLE LANDS

By HENRY J. ALLEN
Former Governor of Kansas

Of the multitude of contributions which Americans have made to the necessities of conditions of the Near East, no single expression of service probably will have so enduring a character as that done in the agriculture of those ancient lands.

There is something peculiarly absorbing in the contemplation that western ideas of agriculture have invaded lands where known agriculture is the oldest, and that in the very shadow of Mount Ararat, keen-eyed Americans are directing this Golden Rule movement of modern agronomy and animal husbandry.

Graduates of first-class agricultural colleges in the United States are teaching orphaned children of Armenians, Greeks, Russians, Tartars, Syrians, Turks and Jews the chemistry of the soil, the tricks of planting, effective rotation of crops, the use of modern machinery, and are making them see that land pulverized with plow and tractor holds moisture better and gets more satisfactory results than soil stirred with a wooden plow.

I think America has done nothing finer in all her history than the constructive work that is now going on in the establishment in Armenia, Greece, Palestine and elsewhere in the Near East, of centers of modern agricultural intelligence properly combined with improved stock breeding.

The agents of the Near East Relief found a people utterly broken. Agriculture and mechanical arts were at a standstill. Life was a struggle of the survival of the fittest. Misery seemed to have reached a static condition.

Into this atmosphere of despair it was necessary for the Americans to introduce a new feeling of hope, a new realization of brotherhood and a feeling that through mutual concern a whole people could be saved to a new life of usefulness.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

One of Oldest Customs

The custom of drinking healths is of great antiquity. At an entertainment given by Hengist, in the Fifth century, to the British king, Vertigern, the daughter of the host, Rowena, knelt and presented the wine cup to the king, saying as she did so: "Dear king, your health," and this is generally quoted as the origin of the custom.

Earth's Temperature

The earth is like a steam boiler jacketed with a layer of asbestos, the central portion, whatever its nature, occupying about three-quarters of the earth's radius, with an outer shell of rocks. If this is so, it will take at least a hundred thousand million years for the internal temperature to fall to half of what it originally was.

Christmas Suggestions

WHAT PRICE THE GLORY OF GIVING

THERE are gifts that please for a moment—an hour—or a day; as beautiful and fleeting as Christmas roses. Then there is the perfect gift of furniture. The gift that endures longer than years—longer than generations. Time deals kindly with its mellow beauty—a beauty not only of form and design but of happy associations. Years come and go—marked by Merry Christmas and Happy New Years—anniversaries and home festivals—and thru it all—gathering undying memories—the gift furniture becomes a part of the family life, enriched by the occasion of its use. This then is surely the perfect gift. Given once it carries for all time its message of friendship and love. While you have been thinking and planning and deciding things for Christmas giving—so have we! And now we are ready for you!—with the smartest and loveliest and most giftable selections of small furnishings, decorative objects and objects and gift furniture for within the home.

Perhaps the bedroom suite above, with its quaint four poster, is the very gift to make this the merriest kind of Christmas for someone.

CROCKEYJOY ADVENTURES

By BETTY BROWNE

(Copyright.)

The Sugar-Stick Orchard RUTH'S big sister was making fudge. The odor of it was tantalizing to Ruth, although she knew it might not be ready to eat for hours yet. This set Ruth to thinking. Should she ask big sister for the dish to scrape, or should she wait until the candy was ready to be cut and served up in the delicious brown cubes, which she knew so well? Those were the queries which played tag with one another through Ruth's mind.

Then all at once she thought of Crockey Town. And she wondered if there were candy shops there, and whether she could induce her old friend, the Crockeyjoy, to buy some of it for her.

So, she took Purz, her kitten with the emerald eyes, opened the push-covered book, and away the two of them went into the strange, enchanted world of Crockey Town.

No sooner had they crossed the drawbridge and entered Crockey Castle, than who should show up but the kindly old Crockeyjoy himself. "Hello, Ruth. How are you? And you, too, Purz; how are you, anyhow?" He called to them, in his cheerful way.

"I'm fine," said Ruth. And "Tip-top," purred Purz. Then Ruth added: "But my mouth is just watering for some candy. I think I could eat pounds of it. Are there any stores in town where I can get some?"

"Well, not exactly," replied the old fellow. Then his brow wrinkled up in a thoughtful frown. At that moment he caught sight of his young nephew, who was going limping down the other side of the street. He waved to the youngster and he presently came abreast of them; and he also was glad to see Ruth, though he was just a bit afraid of Purz.

"Ruth has asked about some candy," said the old fellow to his nephew. "Has the topsy-turvy spring-board been fixed? We don't want to take any chances of Ruth spraining her ankle the way you did. I notice that you will limp."

"But what has a spring-board to do with candy?" asked Ruth. "Do you expect me to do stunts like the circus people? I really don't think that I can do anything which will deserve even one pink gum-drop."

"No, no," answered the Crockeyjoy, and smiled at the thought. "This is a different kind of spring-board than you ever heard of before. If it has been fixed, we can all have a good time this afternoon. Nephew, run along to the jumping-off place and find out about this for us. And you might step in at Mother Papyrus' store and get a paper bag while you're about it."

The boy went his way as though his life depended on it. Meanwhile Ruth and Purz and the Crockeyjoy talked over things together. Ruth learned that the boy's name was Merl, although every one called him

Merl, and that he was named after a famous magician who lived in England hundreds of years ago. "Merl is a pretty good name," thought Ruth to herself. "I wonder why none of the boys I know is called that?"

As Ruth was pondering that thought who should come hopping down the street again but Merl himself. He waved his hat at them and motioned for them to follow him. This they did.

Soon Merl led them to a great, wooded park, which was all shut in with a tall stone wall. The Crockeyjoy told them that this was necessary, or they would be having every child in the Kingdom of Crockey using the spring-board most of the time. This whetted Ruth's curiosity even to a sharper edge. She could hardly wait to find out what the secret of the spring-board might be.

At last they were inside the wall and ready to jump off. Purz and the Crockeyjoy were to spring first. Then Ruth and Merl were to follow. The first two ran and jumped. Instead of falling down, they went straight up and in a moment vanished. And there do you think they landed? I know you can't guess, because they came down—or rather up—into the famous orchard of Sugar-Stick. The whole place was nothing but candy. There was every flavor from winter green to peppermint, and in between.

At last, the odor of vanilla came to overpower all the rest. Ruth felt frowsy and the Crockeyjoy saw how things were with her. Said he: "The jumping-back board is right over here. Come. You and Purz can jump all the way home from here. One, two, three!"

And Ruth landed back in the rocking chair at home.

"A Son of His Father," A Paramount screen version of Harold Bell Wright's newest novel of the same name, produced by Victor Fleming and featuring Bessie Love, Warren Baxter and Raymond Hatton in the cast, will be the feature at the Metropolitan theater Monday next to remain for three days.

Miss Love, as Nora O'Shea, after the death of her mother in Ireland, journeys to Tucson, Arizona, to live with her brother, a cowboy on the ranch owned by "Big Boy" Morgan, played by Warren Baxter.

When she arrives at her destination, the boy is not there to meet her. It develops that he has left the ranch to join in with a gang of cattle smugglers and gamblers, headed by one Zoberster. Morgan, however, receives the girl and lies to her about her brother.

Morgan gets into a gambling session and loses controlling interest in his ranch to Holdbrook (Walter McGrail), a tool of Zoberster.

In time Nora learns the whereabouts of her brother and sets out to try to win him back to honesty, only to be imprisoned herself by the smugglers. It takes "Big Boy" Morgan and all his men, backed up by an entire company of U. S. cavalry to rescue her. The brother dies protecting Morgan. Holdbrook, the gambler, gives up his interest in heart and gives up his interest in the ranch to the girl, knowing that she loves Morgan.

Every scene of the production was taken on the exact locale described by the author in his novel. Paramount set a high standard for outdoor pictures with its Zane Grey production. The same high standard has been maintained in bringing Wright's splendid western thriller to the screen.

Besides McGrail other well known players in the strong supporting cast of the production are Charles Stevens, Carl Stockdale, in the role of Zoberster; Billy Eugene, James Farley, Valentine Zamina and George Kuwa. Anthony Coldewey wrote the screen play.

Oldest Man in

World is 140

London.—A man who claims to be one hundred and forty years old and to be the only living person who saw Napoleon was described to the Royal Geographical society by H. St. J. B. Philby, former British representative in Transjordan.

His name is Hajj Tahir, and he states that he was born in Mecca, and went to Palestine at the age of twelve or thirteen, in 1760, when Napoleon was in Syria.

"He is sound enough in mind and limb," said Mr. Philby, "and has an enormous appetite, and, strangest of all, an indisputable power of mastication with the aid of what purports to be a newly sprouting, but still invisible, third set of teeth."

"The only serious weakness in his claim is that his offspring afford no relevant evidence of his age, as he declares that he committed matrimony for the first time at the age of seventy or thereabouts, and he has recently married again."

Mr. Philby added that, while Hajj Tahir claims to be one hundred and forty, he says that he was born in the year 1215 of the Mohammedan era, or A. D. 1799, which would make him 126 years old.

EASIER HOME ENTRY NOW LEAGUE GOAL

BROADER SEARCH POWERS IS PROPOSED BILL'S AIM

Rumpus Started By Berger and Wheeler, the latter on the War Path and Wants Congress To Amend the Volstead Act to Tighten Further the Provision Respecting Search of Private Homes--Records In Mayflower Hotel Liquor Case Stolen Is Admitted.

The riot of words over prohibition continued unabated at Washington Sunday with new ramifications adding fury to the controversy and fresh incitements in prospect.

The Sunday development included disclosure that a file of government records in the Mayflower hotel liquor case had been stolen from prohibition headquarters, and an announcement by dry leaders that counter moves will be made against the new onslaught by the wets.

The dries are preparing to counter the wet "liberalizing" moves with efforts to amend the Volstead act to tighten search of private homes.

As a consequence of the drive loosed against prohibition by Representative James A. Gallivan in the House Sunday, and the recent liquor indictments in Indiana, Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, and Representative Victor L. Gerger, of Wisconsin, issued statements on the subject of enforcement.

Wheeler struck back at the Massachusetts member, who had denounced him the day before and Mr. Berger, who favors legalization of beer and wine, charged that the dries, by their efforts to enforce the Volstead act, were "creating a series of evils greater than the one they intended to remove."

The Anti-Saloon League counsel announced that a bill soon would be introduced to broaden the powers of agents in searching homes.

Under present provisions of the Volstead act, Wheeler said, it is impossible for enforcement officials to obtain a search warrant for entry of a private home unless they have evidence of sales, and the purpose of the new bill is to make any evidence of manufacture of distilled spirits reason for entry.

As to the government records which were stolen officials would say little. Roy A. Haynes, prohibition commissioner, admitted they had been stolen a few days prior to the trial here of Jules R. Venice, former chief at the Hotel Mayflower and Renardo Blazi, waiter, both of whom were acquitted of conspiracy charges, a few days ago.

Wheeler, however, was acquainted with the disappearance of the records and, in his reply to Mr. Gallivan, inquired why it had not attracted the attention of the house member, whose speech was regarded to be one of the most vigorous attacks upon prohibition in some months.

Mr. Haynes declined to divulge any information he had on the case, and James E. Jones, prohibition director, was absent from the city. Mr. Wheeler, however, said suspicion had attached to one or two persons, but he declined to identify them.

Mr. Haynes said the records were supposed to be in their regular places in metal encased files until they were requested by attorneys preparing for the prosecution of Venice and Blazi. An investigation apparently has failed to solve the mystery, altho Elmer L. Irely, chief of the intelligence unit of the bureau of internal revenue, was not informed of the inquiry, he said, until questions relating to the case were made of him.

The records included reports of the work of Agents E. C. Brigfield and Cola M. Earfly, who planned the Mayflower Hotel trap which developed the charges against Venice and Blazi, with other confidential papers.

SEARCHING FOR MURDERER OF A CHINAMAN

Tentacles of the On Leong and Hip Sing Tongs stretched out for the murderer of Louie Low, the second Chinese slain in Cleveland since last September.

Louie Low's body, the throat slashed and the head crushed in, was found in his laundry Thursday night. He had been dead at least eighteen hours according to the coroner.

The Tongs promised to help police find the slayer, who is believed to have been Louie Low's business partner. Robbery was the motive, Tongmen said they believed. Louie Low was known to carry a large sum of money and this was missing.

The murder was discovered by a cousin of Louie Low.

Steubenville—Several arrests may be made today in connection with the explosion which wrecked the tipple of the Gilchrist mine of the Pittsburgh Coal company in Brooke county, West Virginia, near here Sunday, Sheriff Charles E. Lowe declared.

Cleveland—The explosion of a still in a garage here yesterday resulting in an unidentified man being burned to death may end in the breaking up of a liquor ring, according to detectives.

Articles found in the debris of the building, a garage which had been rented to a man giving the name of Morris Gross including the license plate on a burned truck, were being traced today in an effort to find the owner.

Columbus—G. C. Roley, 35, was killed here this afternoon when a small shack, being transported from the Carnegie Steel plant, toppled off a truck, pinning Roley beneath it.

Frank C. Lehner, 67, was injured but will recover.

Springfield—Six more paving suits were filed today on behalf of the city commissioners and naming F. M. and Ed Ryan, contractors. The city is seeking to recover $66,000 for alleged "skimping" in the use of materials for paving the streets. Two similar suits were filed recently.

Canfield—Fire, which for a time, threatened to wipe out a part of this village, was brought under control today after doing damage estimated at several thousand dollars. Sparks from a defective chimney ignited the roof of a lumber company and only the quick response of volunteer fire fighters, prevented the blaze from spreading.

MRS. S. D. FESS DEAD AS RESULT OF AN ACCIDENT

Wife of U. S. Senator Was a Native of Rushville--Funeral at Yellow Springs.

Mrs. Simeon D. Fess, wife of the senator from Ohio, died Sunday at Washington.

Mrs. Fess died at Emergency hospital late Sunday of complications resulting from injuries received in an automobile accident on Summit Mountain, near Uniontown, Pennsylvania, November 24, while the senator and his party were returning to Washington for the opening of congress.

The funeral party left Washington Sunday evening by train for Yellow Springs where services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mrs. Fess, who was president of the Congressional club, is survived by her husband; three sons, Hamilton, Lehr, parliamentarian of the house of representatives; Lowell, of Columbus, secretary of the Ohio Retail Merchants' association and C. Summer, of Greenfield, Ohio; a sister, Mrs. Minnie Bazole and a brother, Edward Thomas both of Columbus.

Eva C. Thomas Fess was born at Rushville, Ohio, in 1865, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Thomas. She attended public schools and graduated from Ohio Northern university at Ada, Ohio, where she later taught.

While a student there she met Mr. Fess, then head of the American history department and they married in 1890, a year after her graduation. Later they went to the University of Chicago, where Mr. Fess taught.

When he became president of Antioch college at Yellow Springs, Ohio, in 1907, Mr. and Mrs. Fess made that place their home and had lived there ever since.

Mrs. Fess was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Yellow Springs. She was greatly interested in religious activities and belonged to several religious bodies, including the Women's Missionary society of the church. She was also a member of the Yellow Springs Literary association and the Xenia Junior Women's club.

Mrs. Fess has written numerous articles for the Yellow Springs News. Besides these, she has written several articles which have been published in magazines of national circulation. She received her education at Ohio Northern university, Ada, where she was graduated with honors in a literary course in 1889.

Finding Ambergris

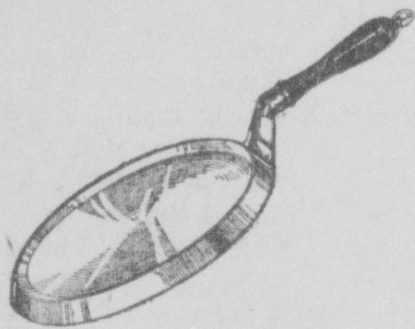

Tramping over Nantucket with his dog, Edward Davis skirted the shore. Wedged between two rocks, washed now and then by the waves, was a sticky, waxy mass. Mr. Davis did not pay much attention to it, but the hunting dog knew his business and persisted in calling his attention to it. Mr. Davis scraped the substance together and took it home. He later brought it to New Bedford and submitted it to Capt. Benjamin D. Cleveland, a retired whaling master, who pronounced it ambergris. If so, the hunting trip nets Mr. Davis $1,792.—New York World.

A Stage Romance

"A H! YOU are superb!" said Madame Olga, who was waiting in the wings of the Universal Vaudeville theater to go on for her turn. Adolphus Maxim came off to thunderous applause.

Madame Olga never had seen or heard Adolphus Maxim before, but artistic fellowship had led her to speak and enthusiasm had colored her greeting.

Adolphus Maxim was a virtuoso—a trombone virtuoso—and his hair, flowing in leonine luxury, had amazed Madame Olga no less than his playing of the trombone had done. His trombone playing was really extraordinary. He could syncopate such classics as Schubert's "Hark, Hark, the Lark!" but was inimitable with such ragtime ditties of the day as "When Father's Whiskers Got Afire." This particular ditty was usually sung to the patter of fire horses' hoofs, bell ringing and whistle blowing off stage—a sort of fire department obligato. By his wonderful art on the trombone Adolphus Maxim could win more applause for "When Father's Whiskers Got Afire" than all this "business," supplemented by the very best ragtime vocalism, could evoke.

Adolphus was flattered by Madame Olga's compliment and waving her extended hand as she went on. He stood in the wings to watch her act and became enthusiastic as he saw her beautifully ample figure swing and sway in the lifting and juggling of heavy weights. She was a strong woman in the winter in the vaudeville, and a lion tamer in the summer in the circus.

"Magnificent" Adolphus exclaimed as she came off also to great applause. A romance had begun. Day after day, night after night, they greeted and applauded each other and grew fonder. Before the week's engagement had ended, Adolphus had proposed marriage and been accepted. Friday forenoon they went together for a marriage license. On the street, everywhere, as in the theater, Adolphus' hair excited wonder and admiration.

The stage is a field of real as well as fictional romance, and this aside from ventures of Johnnies at stage doors and elsewhere and episodes following the perfumed billets-doux of matinee idols.

Here and there is an actor who is almost steadily in the newspapers because of his matrimonial variety. Marital enterprise and the pursuit of art with him go hand in hand. And here and there is an actress of like dual demonstration. Neither of these, of course, changes partners seriously with every change of part, and thus the psychologist cannot lay this amatory inclination to the influence of dramatic authors, although the acting of ever-changing love scenes may have some impulsive effect. If some of those in higher stage walks may marry often, why should not those in the lower walks marry once in a while?

Sunday morning, with four fellow artists, Adolphus and Madame Olga visited a clergyman and were married. The party repaired to Madame Olga's hotel, where her quarters had been extended to a suite, for a wedding feast. After prolonged gayety their friends left them, and the happy couple retired to their individual rooms to dress for their first evening alone.

As Adolphus changed his formal attire for something more comfortable, he heard Madame Olga's voice in extravagant endearment.

"Oh, my darling!" she cried, "how I love you! How I love you!"

"Ah," thought Adolphus, "what a fine woman! And how she loves me!" Joyous, he quietly entered her room.

She stood with her back to the door fondling a chetah cub, which purred responsive affection.

Adolphus swelled with rage and jealousy. "So, madam!" he cried, "that creature is the object of your affection eh?"

As she turned in surprise, she saw Adolphus, but not her Adolphus. His sparse hair was plastered to his head in sections between which were strips of unmitigated baldness that shocked. "Your hair—where is it?" she cried. "My hair? Did you think, then, madam," he sneered, "that you were marrying a wig?"

Madame Olga laughed in a way that made Adolphus shudder. She pointed to the door.

"Go!" she said. "I never want to see your face again!"

And as Madame Olga was a strong woman and had tamed lions, Adolphus went.

ABSTRACT OF THE TAXES FOR PICKAWAY COUNTY

County Treasurer M. B. Trout Is Charged With $950,405.53, Which Is Larger Than Last Year—Circleville City Will Receive $55,488.19, And Our Schools $91,227.49—County Schools And Municipalities Will Get Less Than a Year Ago.

County Auditor Bryce Briggs completed his abstract of taxes a few days ago for 1925, to be certified to the Auditor of State and the State Tax Commission. The abstract shows County Treasurer M. B. Trout charged with $950,405.33 to be collected this December and next June collections.

This amount is $3,138.61 in excess of the total amount charged last year, the total tax value of the County has increased from $55,569,780 last year to $55,754,500 for this year.

The increase is represented in delinquent taxes carried over from last year, and special assessments for Circleville.

The State has a decrease of five hundred dollars due to the levy made to retire bonds issued to pay compensation to war veterans, was decreased one hundredth of a mill.

The townships show a small increase, due to additional road moneys raised in some districts.

The county, schools and municipalities will all receive less than last year.

The following table shows the amount to be collected for each purpose this year together with the increase or decrease compared with last year:

	1925	Increase	Decrease
State	$ 13,938.59	$	$ 509.45
County	250,895.12		4,169.99
Townships	124,407.24	4,806.16
Schools	443,594.97		9,904.95
Municipal	65,013.80		355.90
Total Tax	$97,849.72	$ 4,806.16	$14,940.29
County Special	$ 461.79	$	$ 26.52
Twp. Special	5,866.41		298.98
Mun. Special	10,557.50	7,755.66
Del. Real	24,218.71	3,112.76
Del. Personal	11,451.20	2,729.83
Grand Total	$950,405.33	$ 18,404.40	$15,265.79

Of the above amount Circleville City will receive $55,488.19 for municipal purposes as compared with $56,166.20 last year and Circleville schools will receive, $91,227.49 as compared to $90,610.63 received last year.

OIL OUTLOOK REASSURING

Commenting on our future supply of oil, the Standard Oil Bulletin, published by the Standard Oil Company of California, says: "Predictions of failure of the American supply of oil have been made almost from the beginning of the oil industry. All have proved fallacious. When the production of old fields has dropped off, the oil industry has found new fields."

A committee of eleven members of the Board of Directors of the American Petroleum Institute has just issued a report on the future of the industry. The report draws particular attention to two impending developments of very great importance. One is the extension within the industry of "cracking" crude oil, a process which increases the yield of the all-important gasoline. The other is a change in motor construction which, roughly speaking, will double the mileage of the automobile per gallon of gasoline. Herein is true conservation.

Altogether, the findings of the committee are reassuring. There may be passing periods of shortage of petroleum but there is no danger in the situation.

Japan's Gentle Way

In Japan, when a police officer takes a man into custody, he ties a bit of string around the arrested man's wrist and then leads him by the loose end of the frail fetter to the police station. So strong is the Japanese respect for the law that the piece of string holds the prisoner as securely as though he were manacled by steel.

PUBLIC UTILITIES RULINGS

Columbus, Dec. 18.—(UP.)—The public utilities commission has authorized the Cadiz Bus Line company, operating between Cadiz and Steubenville, to sell its certificate to E. O. Jennings for $50,000.

The commission restricted the authority of the Buckeye Special Transit company to operate busses over irregular routes in Ohio in a ruling interpreting the privileges of their certificate.

The commission held that the company cannot operate busses between points that are on the regular routes of any established transportation company.

The commission's ruling followed a request of C. J. Randall, secretary of the Ohio Motor Bus Owners' Association, for an interpretation of the company's certificate.

COLONEL "BILLY" MITCHELL OFFERED $10,000 POSITION

St. Petersburg, Fla., Dec. 18.—(UP.)—Colonel Wm. Mitchell, center of the recent aviation controversy, has been telegraphed an offer of $10,000 per year to join the editorial staff of the St. Petersburg Daily News, according to a statement issued today by Frank F. Pulver, publisher.

Pulver's offer stated that no censorship of any kind would be placed on Mitchell's writings.

A Simple Frock for the Demure Flapper

SALLY O'NEILL, the screen's new flapper discovery, in a simple party frock of pale pink chiffon bordered with embroidery on the fashionably full skirt, which she wears in "Sally, Irene and Mary," her next film.

The neck and tiny sleeves are quaintly trimmed with the same embroidery. A girdle of pink satin finishes the waistline.

Now that the flapper is fast going out of vogue, the sweet girl graduate is asserting herself with simple girlish frocks.

The CINDERELLA

TRADITION decrees fine sterling silver as the perfect gift to the bride. Good taste demands that it be Gorham sterling silver. And for the June bride or the Autumn bride or any bride at all Cinderella will be the accepted pattern.

Cinderella is the newest product of the Gorham Master Craftsmen. Exquisite design and delicate tracery set it apart even from the most popular patterns of the past and present.

SENSENBRENNER'S
THOUGHTFUL

PROVED

"Do you believe in what they call the unconscious mind?"
"What do you mean by that?" inquired Senator Sorghum cautiously.
"A part of your mentality that causes you to know things and yet not realize that you know them."
"Certainly. Almost any man is liable to have that kind of an attack when he is making out his income tax return."—Washington Star.

Robbery

A man was persuaded by a dealer to give several guineas for a jar which, he was assured, was of great value.
The collector showed his prize to a connoisseur friend, who examined it thoughtfully.
"How much did he hook you for it. Seven guineas? Well, well! And didn't he throw in the marmalade with it? Too bad!"—London Tit-Bits.

The Shrewd Farmer

"Those city folks' boys are out there eating our green apples," said the farmer's daughter.
"That's all right," returned her father. "Let them eat all they want. It will keep them away from the table for a day or two, and I'll charge their daddies for the apples besides."

Too Familiar

First Lady—And then she comes hup an' she swipes me one right across the face!
Second Lady—Lor' now! Did she 'urt yer?
First Lady—Oh, it weren't that wot I objected to so much—it were the blinking familiarity.

THREE GOOD MEALS PER

Ed—Does your girl excel along the lines of physical perfection, Sam?
Sam—Not at all—along the lines of culinary perfection—oh, boy!

Finance Wizardry

The wizard of finance must free O'er ways of getting out of debt. And then to fret he must begin O'er ways of getting deeper in.

Or Fuming Static

Mrs. Arris (seeing sky-writing for first time)—Lawk, Mrs. Iggin, wot be that?
Mrs. Iggin—That'll be some o' that there wireless caught fire, I'll be bound.

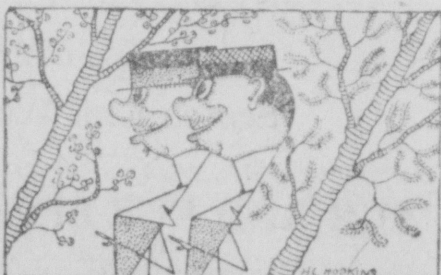

Costly

Frank—What does your dad do?
Furter—Builds dams.
"What does he get for a dam? About $1,000?"
"I should say not. My dad wouldn't give a dam for $1,000."—Texas Ranger.

Good Idea

She—Yes, I would like to go riding with you, but I don't want to go anywhere.
He—Good! Have you a porch swing?

IN THE RIGHT PLACE

Algie—I say, deah boy, do you think we are attracting the proper amount of attention?
Reggie—What a question, silly! Of course we are. Aren't we in the most popular newspaper in town?

Be on a Continuous Diet

Oh, girle, if You always would be lean, Just go ahead And wed that jellybean.

Do Be Careful

Mrs. Hibrow—Her faux pas was noticed by everybody in the room.
Mrs. Lobrow—Well, I cautioned her against wearing those new-fangled arrangements!—Smart Set.

No Place for a Bachelor

HOW IT FEELS

To Fast Longest In History—
And Still Be Alive.

Seventeen years ago, Frederick Hoelzel, a Chicago boy, denied an opportunity to go to college because of ill health due to stomach trouble, began to experiment with his inner mechanism. The result is outlined in an article in this week's Liberty by William F. Forman.

Hoelzel started, by fasting a week, to put on weight. He succeeded, and it started him on a line of dietetic experiments that have made him a veritable walking laboratory for the University of Chicago, Forman recounts.

"Twice within the last four months," the author recounts, "Hoelzel has set new world's records for fasting. Having gone for thirty-three days and seven hours without food, Hoelzel ate a few meals and then started on another fast that lasted for forty-one days and seven hours, a total of one thousand, eight hundred and ten hours without food within a period of four months."

And now, in Liberty, he tells the women folks how to take off superfluous flesh.

And they don't have to starve themselves to do it, either!

OHIO DRUGGISTS MAY SEEK OWNERSHIP LAW

Columbus, Dec. 19.—Ohio druggists may ask the legislature at its next session to pass a law limiting drug store ownership to registered pharmacists. According to the Ohio State Pharmaceutical Association, a certain undesirable class is now invading the ranks of the druggists, which is interested only in the financial returns and not in pharmacy as a profession or in the service that can be rendered the public. As one step in the movement to remedy this condition, bonafide drug stores over the state are being supplied with signs bearing the word "Registered Pharmacist."

BARRERE & NICKERSON,

CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Taming Speed Maniacs

Authorities in Bulgaria sometimes adopt crude methods to enforce the speed limit. During the months when, because the roads are not macadamized, there is a great deal of dust, soldiers and policemen are stationed on roads leading into Sofia. When a car is adjudged to be going too fast an admonition is shouted. If the speed is not slackened immediately a rifle shot is fired into the air. If that does not produce the desired effect aim is directed at the wheels. It may be imagined that unless the rifle is in the hands of an expert marksman the occupants of the car are likely to be hit. But the treatment stops the cars.

QUEEN ESTHER SOCIETY SAW SANTA CLAUS

Last Thursday the Queen Esthers of the Methodist Episcopal church met at the home of Miss Dorothy Denman. Presents were distributed by Santa Claus from the grab-bag.

The meeting was called to order by singing Christmas carols. A business meeting then followed and orders were taken for Queen Esther pins. A new president, Aubrey Wickensimer and a new vice president, Beatrice Hosler were elected to fill vacancies that will be left by Miss Esther and Edna Shasteen on their leaving Circleville. A program then followed consisting of a violin solo by Beatrice Hosler accompanied by Aubrey Wickensimer, a piano solo by Miss Constance Himrod and a piano duet by Misses Aubrey, Wickensimer and Kathryn Morris. Misses Ruth Crable, Louise Martin, Lucile Hegele, Martha Bartley, Mary Rency and Mrs. Charles Reichelderfer, Laura Leist and Waldon Reichelderfer were enrolled as new members.

The meeting was closed by singing "Holy Night." Refreshments were served by the committee for the month. All departed saying they had a fine time.

FOUR PEDESTRIANS KNOCKED OUT

Columbus, Dec. 19.—Professor Charles Sumner Plumb, 66, chairman of the department of animal husbandry at Ohio State University, was injured so badly he is not expected to recover; Mrs. M. Sheridan suffered a fractured leg and internal injuries, and her daughter, Mary Sheridan, suffered several broken ribs last night when a hit-skip motorist knocked them to the street at State and Third streets.

Professor Plumb was widely known. He is a native of Westfield, Mass. He received his bachelor of science degree at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst.

British Honored Sonsof Benedict Arnold

Very little has been written of Arnold outside of his traitorous conduct in connection with the attempted surrender of West Point to the British, says the Dearborn Independent. Through a correspondence with Major Andre, Arnold, then commanding West Point, offered to surrender to the British; and to consummate the plan Arnold and Andre met at midnight on the shore of the Hudson September 21, 1780. The capture of Andre frustrated the scheme, and Arnold fled to the British sloop of war Vulture.

The British made him brigadier general and he fought the American army at Richmond, Portsmouth and New London, Conn. In December, 1781, he sailed for England with his family, who were pensioned by the British government. He received about $31,755 for his alleged losses in deserting the Americans. Failing to get a position in the army he was forced to take up the trade of merchant. He carried on trade with the West Indies, but returned to London in 1791.

War between France and England exposed his shipping to great risks and Arnold on one occasion was captured by a French ship, but managed to escape. The British government still refused to give him active service in the army and he turned his attention to fitting out privateers against France to recover his lost fortune, but being unsuccessful, weighed down by private debts, and despised by America and the British empire, he sank into a state of acute melancholy, and died June 14, 1801, regretting, it is said, his treason.

His first wife gave birth to three sons. His eldest sons received commissions in the British army; and his second son by his second marriage, inheriting his father's daring and military ability, rose to be a lieutenant general, was made aid de camp to King William IV and was created a knight. Arnold's other children held honorable positions, and one of his grandsons, Capt. William Traill Arnold, a brave fighting man, was killed in the Crimean war.

Common Thing Now to Advertise for Mates

It is customary in France and Germany—and particularly Germany—to advertise for a husband or a wife, as the case may be. Judging from the newspapers, indeed, it would seem as though the respective countries were full of well-endowed men and women who, for some reason, have failed to find the right person with whom to share their lives.

It is rather new to see the same procedure in England in the guise of well-advertised newspapers devoted almost entirely to the promotion of marriage. In England the romantic view of marriage has held, at least in theory, and King Cophetua and the beggar maid have everywhere received approval, tacit or other.

There is the greater difficulty of marrying today owing to the discrepancies in the number of men and of women. It is probably a feeling that many women are practically unable to marry today which has caused greater concentration on the subject of marriage to the extent of making it almost a public matter.

Quite apart from the natural desire to marry, the life of the single Englishwoman is often intolerably lonely. She has her work, but she has little besides. And work for work's sake is a dull business. A single man, besides being better paid, has community interests, which are as a rule not shared by women. He has his club, his games, even his favorite bar.

He has strength left over at the end of the day to be vigorous concerning politics or some other hobby. The woman has a narrower sphere, and she has not as a rule the necessary money with which to enlarge it. Matrimony provides some refuge from loneliness—a loneliness from which in the rather sad world of today, the average woman is thankful to escape.—Manchester Guardian.

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

A series of articles by prominent leaders on the Golden Rule as a guide in International Relations.

A SIGHT I SHALL NEVER FORGET

By DR. FRIDJOF NANSEN
Famous Explorer and Humanitarian

A few weeks ago I had a wonderful week with the happy children rescued by the Near East Relief in Armenia. I count those days among the most wonderful of my life.

I have cooperated with the Near East Relief in the past. But never before have I had the privilege of seeing its work so intimately. It has been a great revelation to me. I had never imagined that an American undertaking of such magnitude existed in the Near East.

I have seen the largest gathering of orphaned children in the world. In one spot, the Americans are bringing to independent self-support 11,000 homeless boys and girls. It was a sight I shall never forget. Many were children of kindergarten age, some so small they had to be carried.

The efficiency of the work in the orphanage schools and hospitals was particularly striking, as was the high standard of the American men and women training these children.

As I moved from one building to another, I thought I had never seen in all my life so many children so busy. Everyone was doing something. All were engaged in some sort of useful work. I saw great rooms full of girls making over old clothes sent by the generous people of America, and I stopped to watch other girls bent over intricate embroideries.

One of the delights of my visit was to sit down with the children and partake of the orphan meal of soup and bread, which is again this year to be the meagre fare of thousands of Americans on Golden Rule Sunday, in order to provide food for the orphans. It gave me a real appreciation of the sacrifice so many people in America make each year, and now that I know what it means to these children I intend to join in the observance of the day, an idea that should be a principle of international affairs.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work.

MEN'S LIFE SPAN
PUZZLES SCIENCE

Do Married Men or Bachelors Live Longest Not Answered.

New York.—Which lives longer—the married man or the bachelor? Few other questions in vital statistics have been more widely discussed, says the New York Times. All information bearing on the subject has been studied by physicians, scientists, theologians, social welfare experts and criminologists, and with particular attention by the insurance companies.

The answer to this ancient question has a general and far reaching influence. If it is established that the chances of long life are greater for bachelors than for the married, both men and women will naturally be influenced in choosing between the two states. The moralist finds such statistics the basis for argument. For the insurance companies the question is a very practical one. Before millions of dollars are risked upon the expectation of life, the most reliable figures obtainable are gathered, regardless of trouble or expense.

"Despite painstaking investigation, the problem today is still unsolved."

Hard Words for Bachelorhood.

One of the most distinguished advocates of the good influence of marriage on longevity, Dr. James Stark, registrar general of Scotland, said, after careful investigation, that "bachelorhood is more destructive to long life than the most unwholesome of trades." An array of figures has been quoted to prove this extreme view.

According to Doctor Stark's figures out of every 100,000 married men between the ages of forty and fifty, 1,407 die each year, as compared with 1,337 unmarried men who die among a similar number in the same period. In the early ages from twenty-five to thirty-five years, the proportion of deaths among the unmarried men is even greater. Out of 100,000 married persons, including widowers, from twenty to twenty-five years old, 620 die every year, while in the same number of unmarried persons between the same ages no fewer than 1,231 die annually.

According to other British statistics, the average number of deaths per year among unmarried men between the ages of twenty-nine and forty-six years is twenty-eight in every 1,000, while among married men in the same period the deaths are only 18.

A famous table prepared by Doctor Stark shows the contrast between the mortality of the married and the single is greatest between the ages of twenty and twenty-five, and varies considerably at subsequent ages. His summary of the yearly mortality per 100,000 is as follows:

Ages.	Married.	Single.
20-25	6.26	12.31
25-30	8.23	14.94
30-35	8.65	15.94
35-40	11.67	16.92
40-45	14.07	18.55
45-50	17.94	21.18
50-55	19.54	24.24
55-60	26.14	28.54
60-65	35.63	44.54
65-70	52.93	69.21
70-75	81.56	102.71
75-80	117.85	145.94
80-85	173.88	195.40

Some significant figures along this line have been collected by Bertillon, who formulated the familiar system of finger-print identification of criminals. The investigations of the statisticians of many insurance companies point to similar conclusions.

Old Ones All Married.

The greater longevity of married men over bachelors is also pointed out by Christopher von Ruffland in his work, "The Art of Prolonging Life." This authority goes so far as to say that "there is not one instance of a bachelor's having attained to a great age." He also asserts, as a result of his investigations, that "all those people who have become very old were married more than once." This condition, he says, applies to both men and women. Similar claims for the influence of married life upon longevity might be quoted indefinitely.

Some of the best minds of the age have studied the problem. The statistics above quoted have been attacked by no less an authority than Herbert Spencer. The great philosopher accepted the statistics gathered by the Scotch statistician and others, but disagreed entirely with the conclusion that marriage itself prolongs life. The experts of modern insurance companies, it is found, seem to agree with Spencer's reasoning.

The great mass of statistics on the subject indicates in the main that married men as a rule actually live longer than bachelors, and that the advantage, measured in years, is often considerable. The best information obtainable is that such is true in both America and Europe.

The latest figures on the subject are probably those gathered by Frederick L. Hoffman, consulting statistician of the Prudential Insurance company of Newark. He has found that the death rate among single men in America is appreciably higher than among married men.

MOST ANXIOUS
MOMENTS

In Woman's Life Told By One Who'd Had Them.

What are the most anxious moments in a woman's life? Sophie Kerr, being a noted expert member of that sex, endeavors to tell in Liberty just what moments are the most anxious to the gentler beings.

"Please remember," she writes, "that we are considering the most anxious—not the most tragic, the most painful, or the most unhappy, and that anxiety is rather an agitation of the brain than of the heart."

"It has been suggested that a woman's most anxious moment is when she finds her first gray hair. Imagine that! Why, women of the present time don't care whether they have gray hair or not. There isn't any more age, there aren't any more old ladies knitting by the fireside and feeling neglected and forlorn."

"Beyond popularity, there's the question of marriage. I think the most anxious moment of the business woman is when she applies for her first job. To my mind the most anxious moment that any woman can feel is that of the mother whose children are acting and thinking wholly for themselves, who can no longer influence them, who is out of touch with their interests, and whom they regard as out-moded, out-of-date."

"It is a part of motherhood. But it is, and always will be, the most anxious moment in a woman's life."

Live Stock Needed for Right Farming

Soil Fertility Is Not the Only Big Problem.

Live stock and permanent agriculture have long gone hand in hand. It is a principle as old as agriculture itself that the land needs live stock as truly as live stock needs the land. Neither would one long continue to return a profit without the other. As a rule, the more live stock a farm maintains, the higher the state of fertility.

It is not advisable, however, to overdo the thing. The soil fertility problem is not the only problem the farmer has to face. There is the question of economics always awaiting him. These late years, especially, must he ask himself, "Does it pay?"

It is quite possible to carry the live-stock idea too far, to become overstocked and, because of sanitation, housing facilities, market conditions, etc., to waste one's profits through over-production. Professor Warren of Cornell university, who has given a lifelong study to the problems of farm management, says it is safer and usually pays better for the average farmer to keep no more stock than he has feed for, it being advisable in most cases to have a little feed to sell rather than to have to buy it.

To be a successful farmer, one must make a comfortable living from the land and leave it more productive than he found it. No method has so far been discovered that can bring about this result so simply and so satisfactorily as a well-balanced system of live stock farming, and the satisfaction and profits derived therefrom will depend in no small degree upon the quality of the live stock.

Animal Diseases Cause Great Losses to Farmer

"Diseases cause the greatest losses in animal husbandry," said Dr. V. A. Moore in a talk at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. "For that reason their control is of much importance."

Doctor Moore divides the diseases that affect domesticated animals into three groups, epizootic, infectious and sporadic. "The epizootic diseases, such as pleuro-pneumonia and foot-and-mouth disease, are better known to the public than are the others at the present time, but the losses from them are smaller than those from other diseases. The epizootic diseases are usually acute, highly infectious, and spread very rapidly."

"The infectious diseases which often take on epizootic form are hog cholera, anthrax, Texas fever, rabies, and several poultry diseases. The present knowledge of the nature of these maladies enables live stock sanitary officials and veterinarians to keep them under control. Infectious abortion in cattle and tuberculosis are very destructive and their prevention would save millions annually."

"The sporadic diseases cause the heaviest losses to live stock owners. They are caused by improper care, improper food, mechanical injuries, poisons, general infections, and parasitisms. Care and prompt attention by competent veterinarians will minimize them. In the prevention of sporadic and infectious diseases the owner has much responsibility."

Oats Fed Advantageously to Breeding Swine Herd

Oats have an important place in the making of hog rations, according to W. E. Carroll, chief of swine husbandry, University of Illinois. When oats are cheap in price compared to corn, they can be fed advantageously to the breeding herd. Oats are too bulky to make a good fattening food.

Pigs that are being grown out for the breeding herd as well as mature breeding sows and boars can be fed largely on oats when they are being pastured on good legume pastures.

Oats give better results when they are ground. This is particularly true for feeding young pigs and for sows just prior to farrowing time. When a sow is milking heavy not more than half the ration should be made of oats. Oats can be used for about one-third of the ration for fattening hogs when they are available.

FARM NOTES

It's weather—not wear—that destroys machinery.

Big yields are evidence that the producer has used thought, skill, and patience.

Farm animals must have salt. It whets the appetite and aids in preventing digestive disturbances.

Seeding of wheat should be postponed until the safe date in sections where Hessian fly infestation is common.

Potatoes, whether for seed or eating purposes, should be stored at temperatures of not more than 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

Types of farming vary in profitability to about the same extent that they utilize the operator's time the year around.

Avoid filling the chicken house with chickens beyond its capacity. Each bird ought to have at least eight inches of space on the roost.

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

A series of articles by prominent leaders on the Golden Rule as a guide in International Relations.

FARMERS IN OLD STYLE LANDS

By HENRY J. ALLEN
Former Governor of Kansas

Of the multitude of contributions which Americans have made to the necessities conditions of the Near East, no single expression of service probably will have so enduring a character as that done in the agriculture of those ancient lands.

There is something peculiarly absorbing in the contemplation that western ideas of agriculture have invaded lands where known agriculture is the oldest, and that in the very shadow of Mount Ararat, keen-eyed Americans are directing this Golden Rule movement of modern agronomy and animal husbandry.

Graduates of first-class agricultural colleges in the United States are teaching orphaned children of Armenians, Greeks, Russians, Tartars, Syrians, Turks and Jews the chemistry of the soil, the tricks of planting, effective rotation of crops, the use of modern machinery, and are making them see that land pulverized with plow and tractor holds moisture better and gets more satisfactory results than soil stirred with a wooden plow.

I think America has done nothing finer in all her history than the constructive work that is now going on in the establishment in Armenia, Greece, Palestine and elsewhere in the Near East, of centers of modern agricultural intelligence properly combined with improved stock breeding. The agents of the Near East Relief found a people utterly broken. Agriculture and mechanical arts were at a standstill. Life was a struggle of the survival of the fittest. Misery seemed to have reached a static condition.

Into this atmosphere of despair it was necessary for the Americans to introduce a new feeling of hope, a new realization of brotherhood and a feeling that through mutual concern a whole people could be saved to a new life of usefulness.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

One of Oldest Customs

The custom of drinking healths is of great antiquity. At an entertainment given by Hengist, in the Fifth century, to the British king, Vertigern, the daughter of the host, Rowena, knelt and presented the wine cup to the king, saying as she did so: "Dear king, your health," and this is generally quoted as the origin of the custom.

Earth's Temperature

The earth is like a steam boiler jacketed with a layer of asbestos, the central portion, whatever its nature, occupying about three-quarters of the earth's radius, with an outer shell of rocks. If this is so, it will take at least a hundred thousand million years for the internal temperature to fall to half of what it originally was.

Christmas FOR THE HOME Suggestions

WHAT PRICE THE GLORY OF GIVING

THERE are gifts that please for a moment—an hour—or a day; as beautiful and fleeting as Christmas roses. Then there is the perfect gift of furniture. The gift that endures longer than years—longer than generations. Time deals kindly with its mellow beauty—a beauty not only of form and design but of happy associations. Years come and go—marked by Merry Christmas and Happy New Years—anniversaries and home festivals—and thru it all—gathering undying memories—the gift furniture becomes a part of the family life, enriched by the occasion of its use. This then is surely the perfect gift. Given once it carries for all time its message of friendship and love. While you have been thinking and planning and deciding things for Christmas giving—so have we! And now we are ready for you!—with the smartest and loveliest and most giftable selections of small furnishings, decorative objects and objects and gift furniture for within the home.

Perhaps the bedroom suite above, with its quaint four poster, is the very gift to make this the merriest kind of Christmas for someone.

CROCKEYJOY ADVENTURES

By BETTY BROWNE

The Sugar-Stick Orchard

RUTH's big sister was making fudge. The odor of it was tantalizing to Ruth, although she knew it might not be ready to eat for hours yet. This set Ruth to thinking. Should she ask big sister for the dish to scrape, or should she wait until the candy was ready to be cut and served up in the delicious brown cubes, which she knew so well? Those were the queries which played tag with one another through Ruth's mind.

Then all at once she thought of Crockeyjoy. And she wondered if there were candy shops there, and whether she could induce her old friend, the Crockeyjoy, to buy some of it for her.

So, she took Purz, her kitten with the emerald eyes, opened the plush-covered book, and away the two of them went into the strange, enchanted world of Crockeyjoy Town.

No sooner had they crossed the drawbridge and entered Crockeyjoy Castle, than who should show up but the kindly old Crockeyjoy himself. Hello, Ruth. How are you? And you, too, Purz; how are you, anyhow? He called to them, in his cheerful way.

"I'm fine," said Ruth. And "Tip-top," purred Purz. Then Ruth added: "But my mouth is just watering for some candy. I think I could eat pounds of it. Are there any stores in town where I can get some?"

"Well, not exactly," replied the old fellow. Then his brow wrinkled up in a thoughtful frown. At that moment he caught sight of his young nephew, who was going limping down the other side of the street. He waved to the youngster and he presently came abreast of them; and he also was glad to see Ruth, though he was just a bit afraid of Purz.

"Ruth has asked about some candy," said the old fellow to his nephew. "Has the topsy-turvy spring-board been fixed? We don't want to take any chances of Ruth spraining her ankle the way you did. I notice that you will limp."

"But what has a spring-board to do with candy?" asked Ruth. "Do you expect me to do stunts like the circus people? I really don't think that I can do anything which will deserve even one pink gum-drop."

"No, no," answered the Crockeyjoy, and smiled at the thought. "This is a different kind of spring-board than you ever heard of before. If it has been fixed, we can all have a good time this afternoon. Nephew, run along to the jumping-off place and find out about this for us. And you might step in at Mother Papyrus' store and get a paper bag while you're about it."

The boy went his way as though his life depended on it. Meanwhile Ruth and Purz and the Crockeyjoy talked over things together. Ruth learned that the boy's name was Merl, although every one called him

Merl, and that he was named after a famous magician who lived in England hundreds of years ago. "Merl is a pretty good name," thought Ruth to herself. "I wonder why none of the boys I know is called that?"

As Ruth was pondering that thought who should come hopping down the street again but Merl himself. He waved his hat at them and motioned for them to follow him. This they did.

Soon Merl led them to a great, wooded park, which was all shut in with a tall stone wall. The Crockeyjoy told them that this was necessary, or they would be having every child in the Kingdom of Crockeyjoy using the spring-board most of the time. This whetted Ruth's curiosity even to a sharper edge. She could hardly wait to find out what the secret of the spring-board might be.

At last they were inside the wall and ready to jump off. Purz and the Crockeyjoy were to spring first. Then Ruth and Merl were to follow. The first two ran and jumped. Instead of falling down, they went straight up and in a moment vanished. And there do you think they landed? I know you can't guess, because they came down—or rather up—into the famous orchard of Sugary-Stick. The whole place was nothing but candy. There was every flavor from winter green to peppermint, and in between.

At last, the odor of vanilla came to overpower all the rest. Ruth felt frowsy and the Crockeyjoy saw how things were with her. Said he: "The jumping-back board is right over here. Come. You and Purz can jump all the way home from here. One, two, three!"

And Ruth landed back in the rocking chair at home.

We've Got the Gifts You Get for Men

'Twas the night before Christmas,
And mad was the rush
To get in the stores
Or get killed in the crush.

Pa wanted an overcoat,
Ma bought him a vest;
The coats were all gone,
So she got the next best.

Son asked for a sweater,
And blue was his pick;
No sweaters were left,
What he got made him sick.

But NOW we have everything;
A full line of gifts.
We'll thank you most kindly
To bring in your lists.

"The Store That Treats You Right."

NOW is the time when all good givers do their early shopping. And this is the store to come to for a fresh, complete and sparkling new assortment of things for men.

AMUSEMENTS

"A Son of His Father," A Paramount screen version of Harold Bell Wright's newest novel of the same name, produced by Victor Fleming and featuring Bessie Love, Warren Baxter and Raymond Hatton in the cast, will be the feature at the Metropolitan theater Monday next to remain for three days.

Miss Love, as Nora O'Shea, after the death of her mother in Ireland, journeys to Tucson, Arizona, to live with her brother, a cowboy on the ranch owned by "Big Boy" Morgan, played by Warren Baxter.

When she arrives at her destination, the boy is not there to meet her. It develops that he has left the ranch to join in with a gang of cattle smugglers and gamblers, headed by one Zobester. Morgan, however, receives the girl and lies to her about her brother.

Morgan gets into a gambling session and loses controlling interest in his ranch to Holdbrook (Walter McGrail), a tool of Zobester.

In time Nora learns the whereabouts of her brother and sets out to try to win him back to honesty, only to be imprisoned herself by the smugglers. It takes "Big Boy" Morgan and all his men, backed up by an entire company of U. S. cavalry to rescue her. The brother dies protecting Morgan. Holdbrook, the gambler, gives up his interest in heart and gives up his interest in the ranch to the girl, knowing that she loves Morgan.

Every scene of the production was taken on the exact locale described by the author in his novel. Paramount set a high standard for outdoor pictures with its Zane Grey production. The same high standard has been maintained in bringing Wright's splendid western thriller to the screen.

Besides McGrail other well known players in the strong supporting cast of the production are Charles Stevens, Carl Stockdale, in the role of Zobester; Billy Eugene, James Farley, Valentine Zamina and George Kuwa. Anthony Coldewey wrote the screen play.

Oldest Man in

World is 140

London.—A man who claims to be one hundred and forty years old and to be the only living person who saw Napoleon was described to the Royal Geographical society by H. St. J. B. Philby, former British representative in Transjordan.

His name is Hajj Tahir, and he states that he was born in Mecca, and went to Palestine at the age of twelve or thirteen, in 1799, when Napoleon was in Syria.

"He is sound enough in mind and limb," said Mr. Philby, "and has an enormous appetite, and, strangest of all, an indisputable power of mastication with the aid of what purports to be a newly sprouting, but still invisible, third set of teeth."

"The only serious weakness in his claim is that his offspring afford no relevant evidence of his age, as he declares that he committed matrimony for the first time at the age of seventy or thereabouts, and he has recently married again."

Mr. Philby added that, while Hajj Tahir claims to be one hundred and forty, he says that he was born in the year 1215 of the Mohammedan era, or A. D. 1799, which would make him 140 years old.
